

Publication ethics and publication malpractice statement

The Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations is committed to upholding the ethical standards of scientific publications and takes all possible measures against any publication malpractices. The journal publishers endorse the principles of transparency and good practice established by the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).

The Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations prevents ghost-writing, guest authorship and honorary authorship in academic research. All parties who have made a substantive contribution to the paper should be listed as authors. Principal authorship, authorship order and other publication credits should be based on the relative scientific or professional contributions of the individuals involved. Those who contributed to the work but do not meet the authorship criteria can be mentioned in the Acknowledgments. The principal author must be prepared to sign the copyright agreement on behalf of all the authors. The signed agreement and declaration of authorship should be attached to the submission.

When submitting an original text to the Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations, the authors accept customary practice of the scientific community: they shall submit only original works, which are not subject to evaluation process by other journals. Similarly, the original texts submitted to the journal shall not be sent to other publishers while the evaluation process carried out by our journal has not been completed. The authors must comply with the international regulations concerning copyright of the texts, images and other materials included in their works submitted for publication. The Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations prevents copyright infringement, plagiarism and other breaches of best practice in publication. Plagiarism is not acceptable and plagiarized content will not be considered for publication. If plagiarism is identified, the Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations follows the COPE plagiarism guidelines. If plagiarism is detected during the peer review process, the paper may be rejected. If plagiarism is detected after publication, the Latin American Yearbook - Political Science and International Relations may issue a correction or retract the paper, as appropriate.